Filmmaker/Train the Trainer/Mentor for Yangon Film School in Yangon, Myanmar

Background

The Yangon Film School is a film school that uses the medium of film to bring socially critical issues to the public and as a development policy instrument to raise awareness. Young creative talents are encouraged in conflict-sensitive and peace-oriented reporting and supported in their role as initiators of dialogue between ethnic and religious groups in Myanmar. The videos and documentaries of the Yangon Film School attract international attention. The main topics are women, peace and reconciliation. There are several cooperations with cultural institutes and foundations in the fields of culture, art and media, for example with the Goethe-Institut, thus providing a platform for artistic exchange worldwide.

There is a severe lack of practitioners and teachers. Therefore the Yangon Film School seeks to develop and train its own personnel and students in management and production of film with focus on technical aspects.

Job Scope

You support the Yangon Film School by advising and coaching students, alumni and teachers in the production of films. Whereas the young students already have ideas and basic knowledge in film production, it is your task to provide technical support in film conception and production. In doing so, you will proceed in a participative and process-oriented manner that includes all participants.

As Mentor / Train The Trainer you would be responsible for the following:

- Identification of topics through trend scouting
- Selection of protagonists and film types
- Cutting and editing
- Budgeting

Qualification Profile

- A background/relevant qualification in media, preferably in production/management of film
- Professional experience and knowledge of management and production of film
- Competency in English (both written and spoken)
- Experience in a multi-ethnic/-religious country context would be an asset
- Pragmatism and pleasure in supporting young people round off your profile

Citizenship of a European Union Member State or Switzerland is required.
